

SOME REMARKS ON THE ARTICLES ABOUT EUGEN LEMBERG

Hans Lemberg

Adding to the other contributions in the present issue about the biography and work of Eugen Lemberg (1903-1976), Eugen Lemberg's son, Hans Lemberg, writing from the perspective of both a contemporary having witnessed most of the relevant events and an historian with an intimate knowledge of recent developments, and relying on first-hand knowledge of his father's life and the papers he left, furnishes some additional facts and figures, but he also introduces some new aspects on the change in Eugen Lemberg's political views and on his personal life and career, mostly concerning the period between the 1930s and the 1960s. Thus, a somewhat different view on the person and the relative weight of some aspects in Eugen Lemberg's work is being sketched.
